

Planning comes to YouTube!

If you've never heard of YouTube, then where have you been? It is a huge internet phenomenon.

Someone recently posted a nine-part video of a presentation given by famed architect Andres Duany in San Antonio from about 15 years ago. He's a pretty good speaker and very clearly articulates the differences between suburban sprawl and traditional neighborhood design (TND). Even though the presentation is a few years old, the issues are the same as they are today. Each segment is about ten minutes, but it is well worth watching the whole thing.

The link to the first video is: <http://youtube.com/watch?v=rwd4Lq0Xvgc>
The other eight segments are listed there too.

Information on Duany:

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Andres\_Duany

<http://www.katarxis3.com/Duany.htm>

<http://www.housingzone.com/topics/pb/management/pb02aa022n.asp>

For more, do a google search on his name.